1. Can you predict what will happen when I press OK?   1 / 1 point

○ Yes, Excel will pop up an error message because I have forgotten to include an equal sign.

⦿ Nothing goes wrong at this stage, you can press OK, and it will proceed as normal.

○ No, it is unpredictable what will happen because the correct thing would have been to include an equal sign. It is bad practice to do this but the Scenario Manager can still function normally when it's done.
✅ Correct
Yes, this is in fact correct, it is only when we try to show the scenario, that the above formula will be treated as text and may return a #VALUE error.

2. Refer to the worksheet below. This is the Scenario Summary for data on a different worksheet. What scenarios have been added to the Scenario Manager?   1 / 1 point

(One or more correct answer possible. Partial credit will be awarded.)

☑ Less Gardens.

✅ Correct
Yes! The title in the heading gives this away!

☐ Current Values

☑ More Gardens.

✅ Correct
Yes! The title in the heading gives this away!

3. Refer to the worksheet below. This is the Scenario Summary for data on a different worksheet. For the Scenario Manager to be meaningful, which of the following must be true?

○ Cells B38:B40 must have calculations.

⦿ Cell B40 must have a calculation.

○ Cell B38 must have a calculation.

✓ Correct

Indeed. For the Scenario Manager to be meaningful, we are trying to see what a particular result is depending on various scenarios for our inputs.
